FEMINIST COACH ACADEMY CERTIFICATION CRITERIA

In order to become certified in Feminist Coach Theory by the Feminist Coach Academy (FCA), trainees must have:	✓
Fully paid for and completed every training module (including chosen elective modules) of the FCA Training. Trainees can use the Progress Checklist in the Members' Portal to track their progress against this criteria during the training program.
Submitted completed versions of the class workbooks, integration workbooks, and other course requirements. A FCA assessor will review the submission and provide feedback if any further clarification or work is required.
Participated in 100% of Integration Calls hosted during the training period. If a trainee is unable to attend an Integration Call/s live due to timezone and scheduling conflicts, they will be required to watch the replay and submit evidence of having completed the actions and homework outlined on the Integration Call as instructed in the membership site.
Submitted responses to any follow up questions and requests for further clarification or evidence following a FCA assessor's review of submitted workbooks, integration actions and assessments by the specified due dates.
Successfully completed a Feminist Coach Theory Multi-Media Final Project, which consists of five parts (submitted in written, video and/ or audio format) where the trainee will be required to submit: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> A. A summary of their understanding of Feminist Coach Theory and how it applies to the context of their work specifically; B. A summary of their definition and understanding of each of the key terms provided in the final project outline; C. A critical analyses of two texts from the FCA mandatory reading list; D. A response to three client case studies on how they would respond to issues raised during their personal or professional life using what they have learned about Feminist Coach Theory during the FCA training; and E. An Action & Accountability Plan articulating what they plan to do to integrate their learnings from the training and commit to the ongoing process of learning, unlearning and being held accountable to this life long work. Any questions answered incorrectly on the Feminist Coach Theory exam and what has been done to learn further about these should be examined as part of the Action & Accountability Plan too.

Trainees will receive further details on the final project requirements toward the end of the training, including submission, formatting (e.g., word length and/or video length) and assessment criteria.
Indicated that they feel in integrity about being a proud ambassador of the FCA. If the trainee does not feel in integrity being an ambassador of the FCA and being associated with the organisation as coach or practitioner certified in Feminist Coach Theory, the FCA advises that you consider not applying for certification.
Accept and sign an FCA Certification Agreement provided upon application for certification.
Understand that further paperwork, as well as further certification renewal criteria may be required in the future as the program evolves.

Please Note:

We appreciate that the FCA certification criteria and process is rigorous and time consuming. We believe that being certified in Feminist Coach Theory comes with great responsibility and want to ensure that the FCA process respects this.

Certification timelines are intake-specific and will be provided during the training period.
